Abstract—Applications like word processors and other writing tools typically include a grammar checker. The purpose of a grammar checker is to help users avoid making errors in their writing. In this paper, we present a novel approach for detecting grammatical errors in text using a ngram based ruleset. We evaluate our approach on a dataset of 100,000 sentences and achieve an accuracy of 92%. This approach has the potential to be used in real-world applications where accuracy and speed are important.
